Wayward whales reach Pacific ocean

A pair of humpback whales who lodged in West Sacramento's port for a few days beginning on May 16 have apparently made it all the way back to the open ocean.

Researchers following them and trying to coax them downstream report last seeing the mother and calf around May 30, near the Golden Gate. They are presumed to have exited San Francisco Bay.

The pair, nicknamed "Delta" and "Dawn," created a sensation as they ventured into freshwater – drawing thousands of spectators to West Sacramento to whale-watch. Both animals had been injured, apparently by a boat or ship propeller.

Fans of the whales received a scare recently when fishermen reported spotting a whale carcass near the Golden Gate in the Pacific. But the dead whale -- apparently the victim of a collision with a vessel -- was a California gray whale, not a humpback like "Delta" and "Dawn."

Escapees caught

All three men who escaped from the Yolo County Jail in Woodland on May 24 have been recaptured, a sheriff's spokesperson told the News-Ledger last week.

Suspects Mark Luis Amacher, Jr., 28, and Jose Enrique Torres, 35, were taken into custody without incident after an employee of a Woodland homebuilder saw them in a house under construction – and the pair told him they were "painters."

The third suspect, Alexander Joseph Roberts, 21, was apprehended separately.

The three, awaiting sentences for nonviolent misdemeanor and felony charges, had allegedly escaped by breaking a window and using a blanket to help get over a razor-wire fence.

'Good Samaritan' bilks woman at area gas pump

The Yolo County District Attorney's office reports that an elderly woman was victimized in a scam at the gas pump last month – and warns others not to fall prey to the same trick.

The woman drove in to a gas station at an undisclosed spot, where a "good-looking young man" offered to help her pump fuel. After the man filled her tank, he pretended to put the gas nozzle back into the pump. But instead, he left it out and used it to fill his own car tank, charging the gas to the victim's card.

Ballplayer looks back

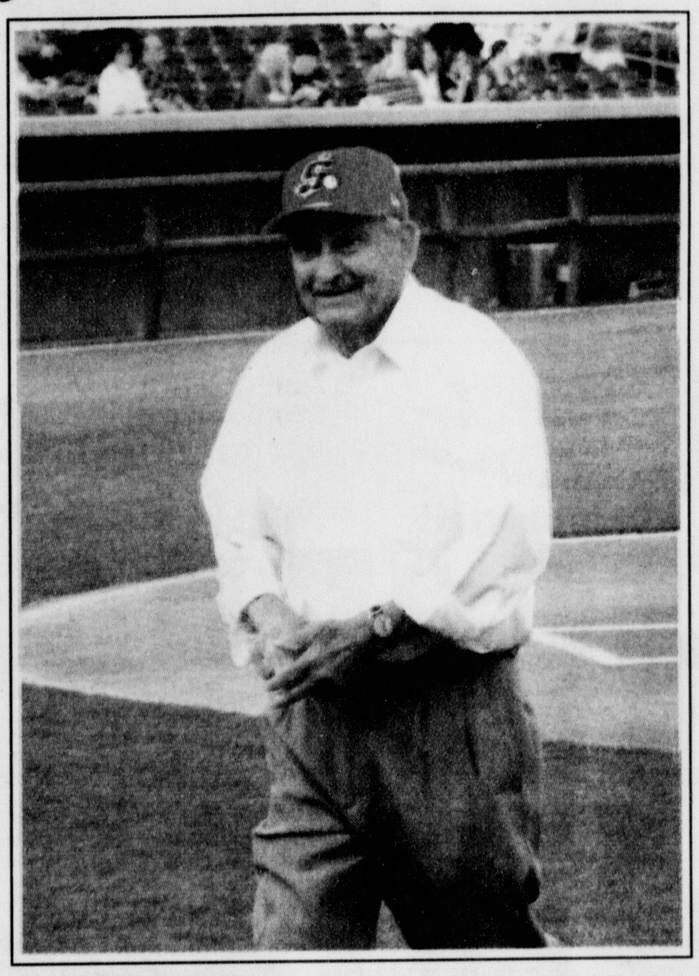

■ Native of West Sacramento's 'Bryte' neighborhood honored by Stockton Ports in remembrance of championship run

By Daryl Fisher
Features Editor

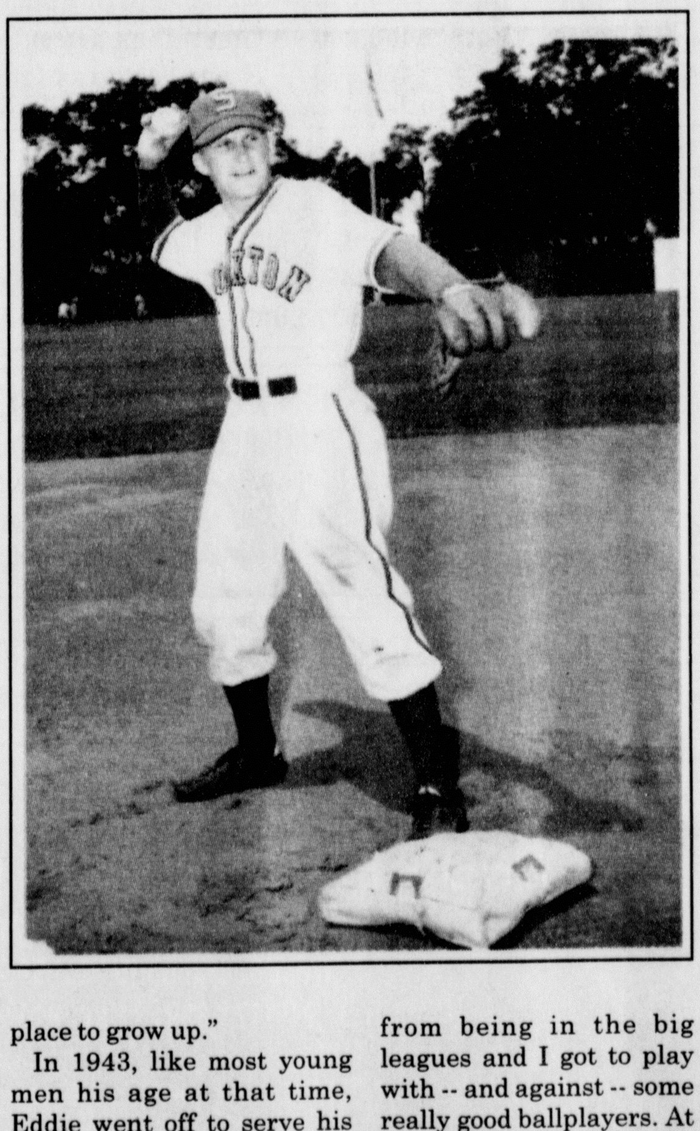

A few weeks ago, the Stockton Ports professional baseball team honored Eddie Samcoff and a couple of his 1947 teammates in pregame ceremonies at Stockton Ballpark. That great championship team won 26 consecutive games, which is still a California League record, and finished 16 games ahead of rival clubs from Visalia and San Jose. Eddie hit .315 with 41 doubles that year, made the Cal-League All-Star Team, and was also named the league's Most Valuable Player.

Eddie Samcoff grew up in Bryte and acquired quite a few of his considerable athletic skills while playing sandlot baseball and other sports with his many childhood friends.

"Bryte and Broderick were really special places to grow up," recalled Eddie. "My mother and father left Russia to get away from the revolution that was going on over there, and after they met in San Francisco and were married, they moved to Bryte in the early 1920's to raise their family. We were one of the first Russian families to settle in Bryte and I went to Bryte Elementary School and then later on took that long bus ride every weekday to Woodland High School with the rest of my friends. Back in those days, Bryte and Broderick were made up of these wonderful Italian, Portuguese, and Russian communities where everyone knew everyone else and we all got along really well together. When my friends and I weren't in school, we would get up every morning and spend the whole day playing baseball, or we would go fishing or hunting, and we wouldn't get back home until almost dark. I had such nice friends growing up, like Bill Balakin, Bob Domasky, Boris Kristoff, and Pete Zenovieff. All of our families would get together, especially at Easter, and I have many fond memories of those days. For instance, the Russian kids would play the Italian kids on one of those old outdoor basketball courts and we would have ourselves a grand time! There were so many wonderful Italian families living in Broderick back then, like the Pierucci's, and the Gustalli's, and the Barbieri's -- and I could name a dozen more. Like I said, it was truly a special place to grow up."

EDDIE SAMCOFF above, recently receiving honors in Stockton, and below, dressed to play for the Stockton Ports in 1947

In 1943, like most young men his age at that time, Eddie went off to serve his country in World War II and spent 26 months with the Marines in the South Pacific, seeing action in such places as Guam and Okinawa. When the war was finally over, he returned to Bryte and it wasn't long before he was playing professional baseball. He was offered a chance to try out with the Stockton Ports, made the team, and went on to have really good years in 1946 and 1947. By 1948 he was playing for the Oakland Oaks in the Pacific Coast League against very talented teams like the San Francisco Seals and the Sacramento Solons.

"Back then," explained Eddie, "the Pacific Coast League was just one step away from being in the big leagues and I got to play with -- and against -- some really good ballplayers. At one point, I was the shortstop on the Oakland Oaks and Billy Martin was the second baseman. Casey Stengel was our manager and he really liked Billy and the aggressive way he played the game. As you know, both Casey and Billy went on to have outstanding careers with the New York Yankees."

In addition to being an excellent infielder, Eddie usually batted second in the lineup and was very good at doing all the little things that make a baseball player appreciated by his manager, teammates, and fans. He

Public workshop to highlight south-area expansion project

■ 'University Park' promises amenities, hopes to be annexed into City of West Sacramento

Planning commissioners and members of the public will get a close look at the proposed "University Park" project on June 21.

The 587-acre proposed development is located just south of city borders, and backers hope to persuade city and county officials to annex the property into West Sacramento to clear the way for development. The current proposal by Riviera Lakes Joint Venture LLC includes plans for 1,766 to 2,358 units of housing, offered in two different design options. The first proposal, of 1,766 units of "active adult" housing, would include a "destination hotel/spa, a winery operation, and open space uses including an arboretum and a lake," according to the city planning department.

The second option, for 2,358 housing units, would set aside 1,213 units for "active adults" and would be developed with an education center, commercial and open space uses.

The 20-year old city has never yet approved an expansion of its borders, although the "University Park" proponents have attempted to win approval for prior development plans on the site.

"University Park" is located between the Sacramento River and Jefferson Boulevard, south of the city limits located past Burrows Avenue.

The workshop will be one of a number of items on the agenda for the planners' 6 p.m. meeting on Thursday, June 21. Other items include a workshop on the "Gallery" project, which envisions mixed-use development at 301 F Street in the north area. Also scheduled for the meeting is a workshop on the "Washington Street Property," with high-density housing planned for seven acres bounded by West Capitol Avenue and G, 3rd and 5th streets.

Who taught you to drive a car?

My Back Pages

By Daryl Fisher

Quite a few years ago, after my only daughter had just crashed her car into a parked vehicle while driving and trying to keep a milkshake from accidentally falling out of her hand at the same time, I raced to the scene to find her basically unhurt although the front end of her car looked like an accordion. While talking to the policeman who had phoned me I also learned she had left her driving license at home, forgot to put her proof of insurance in the glove compartment, and came within a few inches of having her head go through the windshield.

Later that week, in a column I wrote about the incident, I penned the following paragraph:

"As the anger inside of me began to build, I wanted to grab my beloved daughter by the shoulders and shake her until she completely understood the following: Parents live under the very comforting illusion that if they spend 18 years or so properly raising their children, then those children will somehow grow into reasonably responsible and mature young adults who will no longer worry us to death. And after those 18 long and hard years, the very last thing we ever want to get is a phone call in the middle of the night informing us that our child's life has been snuffed out in a damn automobile accident."

Anyway, my daughter is my oldest child, and after her accident, I decided I would make an even more determined effort to make sure her younger brothers were properly trained in how to drive a motor vehicle before they were ever turned loose in one.

"You were more or less a Nazi," explained my middle son in recently describing my training techniques when I used to take him out on drives before he went for his driving license exam.

"But you've never been in an accident, have you?" I reminded him.

However, realizing that I may have indeed gone a little bit overboard with my oldest and middle sons, I reluctantly agreed to let the latter take my youngest son out on his first couple of driver training forays.

"So, how did it go?" I asked with great interest when they had finally returned safely from the first one.

"Well," explained my middle son while my obviously worried youngest son looked on, "he actually did pretty good. In fact, he did everything really well -- except for one little thing."

"And what is that?" I asked with interest.

"Well, he doesn't steer very well. But honest, Dad, he did everything else great!"

"He can't steer?"

"Not very well."

"But what's the bloody good of doing everything else well if he can't steer?" I demanded to know.

"I'll get better," my youngest son quickly promised.

Anyway, to make a long story short, after quite a bit of negotiation, it was finally agreed that instead of me or his older brothers being responsible for teaching my youngest son how to drive, his mother (who is much more tactful than all of us put together) volunteered to give it a shot.

"So," I asked my son after he and his mother had been out on a few test drives, "how goes the driver training?"

"Okay, I guess."

"Are you always staying right around or under the speed limit?"

"Yes."

"And I want you to always remember that there's never any need to get to where you're going a few minutes faster."

"I will."

"And are you always looking in your mirrors?"

"Yes."

"Good, because it's just as important to know what the people behind you are doing as it is to know what's going on in front of you."

"I know."

"Has your mom mentioned to you that I don't want you talking on a cell phone while you're driving, or eating a Carl's Jr. burger, or playing your music so loud you can't concentrate on driving, or chatting with whoever you've got in the back seat?"

"Yeah, she's said all that stuff."

"And do you understand that you should always check to make sure that there's enough air in your tires before going any place?"

"I do."

"And you know that you absolutely always have to wear your seat belt, right?"

"I always do."

"And you are never, ever, under any circumstances, to get behind the wheel of a car if you've been drinking."

"I would never do that."

"Well," I had to admit, "it sounds like things are going pretty well. Plus, your mother tells me you now steer better than anyone in the family."

"Yeah, I think I should be able to pass my driver's test with no problem."

"Good. So, I guess letting your mother teach you how to drive turned out to be best for everyone."

"Yeah, I guess so."

"And it sounds like you've learned all the things I wanted you to know. Was there anything else you learned that kinda surprised you?"

"Just one thing."

"And what was that?"

"I had no idea that Mom knew so many cuss words."

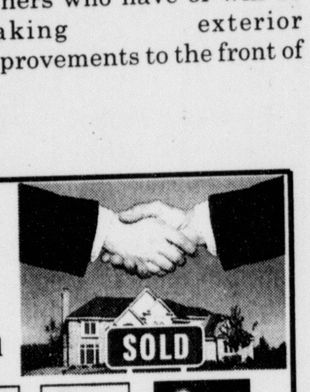

Have you created 'curb appeal'?

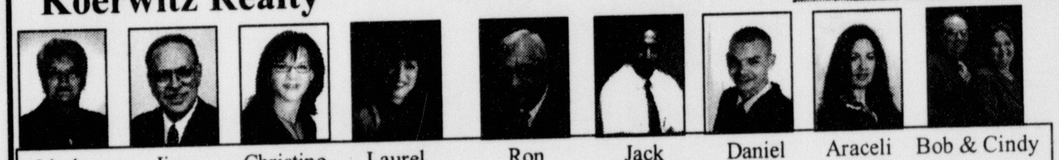

The City of West Sacramento will begin accepting entries beginning June 4th for the annual "Best on the Block" program, a curb-side beautification program for residents and small business owners who have or will be making exterior improvements to the front of their property.

If the improvement is visible from the street and has a positive impact on the neighborhood, it's eligible to be submitted to Best on the Block. The event, sponsored by Waste Management, Wallace Kuhl & Associates, ASB Properties, Turner Construction, 1st Northern Bank, IKEA, US Bank, Hollywood Hardware, and the West Sacramento Redevelopment Agency, will be awarding prizes of up to $1,000 to qualifying entries for their efforts. Contest ends August 31, 2007. For more information and to download an application go to http://www.cityofwestsacramento.org/cityhall/departments/pcs/botb.cfm.

SPORTS INSIDER

By Richard Novoa

The NBA Championship series tips off on Thursday night with Tim Duncan and his San Antonio Spurs hosting King James and the Cleveland Cavaliers. The Spurs are the heavy favorites and rightly so not only for their long history of winning NBA titles but because they are the best team on paper in the NBA.

The first game in Spurs history, the Spurs fell to the San Diego Conquistadors 121-106 in the HemisFair Arena in 1973 of course that was in the American Basketball Association. The Spurs entered the NBA in 1976 and actually made the playoffs. The Spurs won the 1997 Lottery and the right to select Wake Forest star Tim Duncan and teamed with David Robinson the Spurs were set for the future.

On June 25, 1999 the Spurs beat the New York Knicks to win their first NBA championship. June 15th of 2003 the Spurs won their second title and then followed up in 2005 with their third championship in seven years.

Cleveland, which lost in seven to Detroit in last year's East semis, has advanced to the NBA Finals for the first time in franchise history. They swept No. 7 Washington, 4-0, in the quarterfinals, beat New Jersey in six in the semis and surprised the top-seeded Pistons in six in the conference finals.

Imagine the Cleveland Cavaliers who won only 17 games the season before the 22-year-old James arrived on the scene. Now James, who scored Cleveland's final 25 points and finished with 48 in the Game 5 thrilling double-overtime victory over Detroit in the East finals, will be leading them to their first NBA Championship game. James has been phenomenal in the postseason. He leads the Cavaliers in scoring (25.8 ppg) and assists (8.3 apg) in the playoffs.

Rookie Daniel Gibson has also stepped up for the Cavaliers. The Texas product came through big time against Detroit, as he hit clutch threes and has been productive while fellow guard Larry Hughes has battled through a heel injury. Gibson has averaged 13.5 points per game in the East finals and made 50 percent of his attempts from three-point range.

Center Zydrunas Ilgauskas is averaging 13.8 points and a club-high 9.5 rebounds in the postseason for Cleveland, while power forward Drew Gooden has been tough on the boards and has collected 11.1 points and 7.9 rebounds.

The Spurs, who are 7 ½ point favorites in the first game, are 7-2 at home and 5-2 on the road in this year's playoffs while the Cavs are 7-1 at home and 5-3 as the visitor in this year's postseason. So, who is going to be the 2006/07 NBA Champion?

It will be extremely hard for Cleveland to handle Tony Parker, Manu Ginobili, and Tim Duncan but the secret to the Spurs' success has been their bench. The Spurs will smother you with defense especially from players like Finley, Oberto, Bowen and don't forget that Kings nemesis Robert Horry!

King James has been great in the playoffs, and will prevent San Antonio from sweeping the Cavaliers. The Spurs will simply be too much for the James Gang to handle, I like the Spurs in six!

Kings Korner

While the Spurs and Cavs close out the NBA season the Sacramento Kings are in the final process of selecting their new coach. Their leading contender was Stan Van Gundy but Florida Coach Billy Donavan changed is mind after signing a 5-year $27.5 million contract with the Orlando Magic last Friday so now Van Gundy returns to the top of the Orlando's list. The Magic sold 2,000 new season tickets after they announced the hiring of Donavan! Van Gundy may end up with a nice bargaining chip to deal with the Maloof's but late breaking news may force the Kings to hire Kurt Rambis.

Diamond Notes:

The Giants (26-29) finally dumped their closer, Armando Benitez, to the Florida Marlins for a relatively new pitcher Randy Messenger. It was about time the G-men gave up on the overweight and underachieving pitcher. The bad news was the Giants had to eat about $3 million of his contract. The Bonds watch continues with Barry still needing 10 home runs to break the record but the slugger has hit only one round tripper in his last 61 trips to the plate.

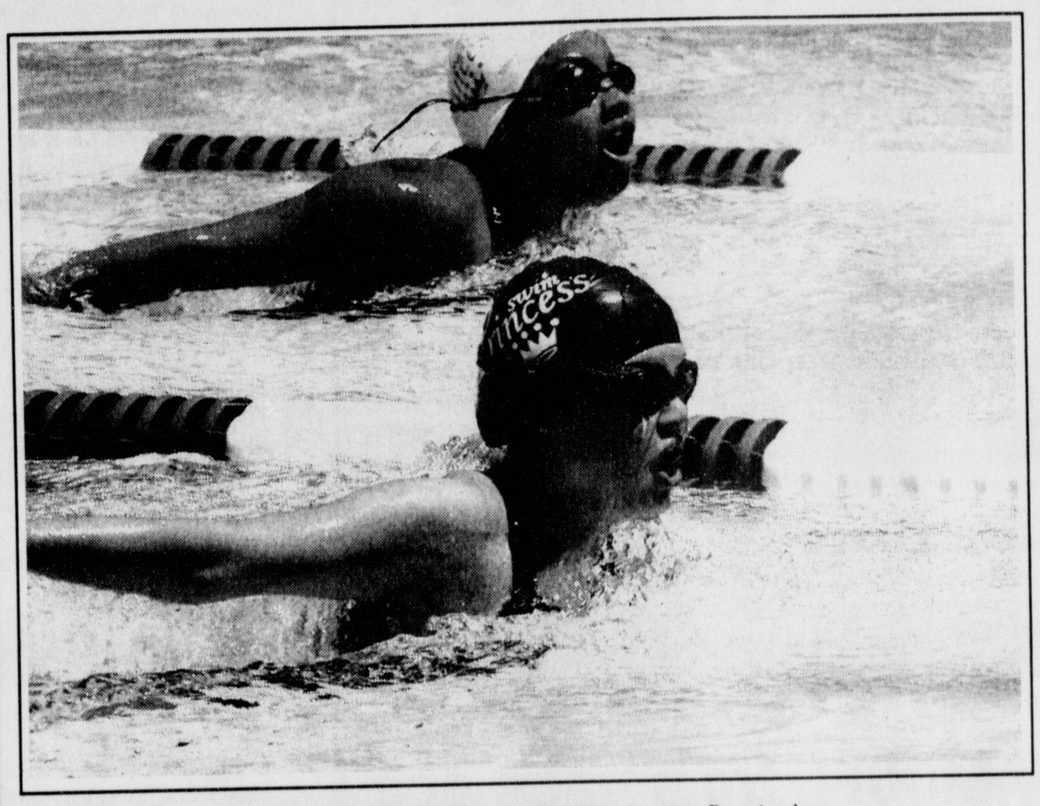

The A's (28-27) are in Oakland this week against the Boston Red Sox and then host their cross town rival Giants in another weekend "Battle of the Bay." The A's recalled River Cats pitcher Santiago Casilla, who was 2-1 with 4.13 ERA in 22 games with the Gatos. Poor Jack Cust, who just two weeks ago was on fire, is now 4 for 35 (.114) in his last 11 games after going 13 for 42 with 8 home runs and 20 RBI's in his first 13 games.

Dolphin Austin Bouche broke a team record, swimming the 50-yard butterfly event in 26.97 seconds, eclipsing the prior team record of 27.23 seconds held by Wesley for the 15-18 year age group.

Other teams in the Dolphins' Mother Lode conference include Fair Oaks, Carmichael, Rio Vista, Parkway and North Highlands. The Dolphins' "home pool" is at River City High School.

Yolo wine & food featured at Copia

From Beth Gabor
County of Yolo

Almost a year ago the Yolo County Board of Supervisors gave direction to County Agricultural Commissioner Rick Landon to go forth and prosper with a new initiative to promote the county's rich food, wine and agricultural heritage and industries. Thanks to the efforts of contractors Ann M. Evans and Georgeanne Brennan, the Yolo Food and Ag Marketing Program is off to a flying start with a special event featuring Yolo County's bounty on July 28 and 29 at COPIA, the American Center for Wine, Food and the Arts in Napa, entitled "Discover Yolo County - Wine & Food Festival."

"Our food and agricultural marketing program provides a tremendous opportunity for our residents and visitors to our area to connect with local agriculture," notes Yolo County Board of Supervisors Chair Mariko Yamada. "We are delighted that Yolo County's bounty will be highlighted at this year's Wine & Food Festival."

Conceived of, and partially funded by Robert and Margrit Mondavi, COPIA has previously showcased powerhouse food and wine counties which include Sonoma, Napa, and Mendocino. This year's festival will kick off with Yolo County wineries pouring tastes of sparkling wines, Pinot Noir, Zinfandel, Chardonnay, Petit Sirah and more. In the vast atrium space at COPIA the wines will be accompanied by appetizers and food samples also showcasing Yolo County's bounty. The wine pouring will be preceded by a panel discussion with Yolo County vintners and COPIA wine master, Peter Marks. Local celebrity chef, Rachel Levine, will be supervising the wood-fired outdoor oven serving up sweet and savory flatbreads, and cooking demonstrations will be provided by Winters' Buckhorn Steak and Roadhouse co-owner, Melanie Bajakian and Davis' Tuco's Wine Market and Café chef/ owner, Pru Mendes, which will feature Yolo-grown beef, pork and vegetables.

Other workshops and seminars offered throughout the weekend include: Taste the Terroir Soil Bar; Sensory Evaluation of Heirloom Tomatoes; Pairing Yolo County White Wines with Artisanal Cheeses; and Bogle Winery Petit Sirah Port with Cheeses and Chocolate. Both days, samples of Yolo-grown foods will be offered from taste carts, tours will be held of the center's gardens, museum and art gallery, including a display of Yolo County plein aire paintings for sale. Many Yolo County nut and olive oils and wines will be available for sale in the gift shop.

Agricultural Commissioner Landon notes "The total gross valuation for all agricultural commodities produced in Yolo County is well over $300 million. Field labor, processing, transporting, marketing and other farm-related services significantly multiply the value agriculture has to the county. When the multiplier effect of related industries is considered, agriculture contributes over $1 billion to the economy of Yolo County."

Mr. Landon will welcome guests to the grand finale – A Village Feast, Yolo Style – on Sunday, July 29 which includes a sit-down, multi-course meal in the center's garden beginning with appetizers and sparkling wine, followed by platters of heirloom tomatoes, bowls of organic vegetables accompanied by aioli made from local olive oil, grilled lamb from Full Belly Farms and all of this ultimately to be washed down with Yolo-produced rosé, white, and red wine. The dessert - fresh fruit tarts from Yolo orchards, of course.

Westmore award

School staff Barbara Butler, Carla Marquez, Carrie Conlon and Amy Davis after Westmore Oaks Elementary School received an "Academic Achievement Award" from state school superintendent Jack O'Connell

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

Westmore Oaks Elementary School is celebrating the receipt of a "Title 1 Academic Achievement Award" from the state's department of education.

The campus, located on Fallbrook Street near Park Boulevard, is one of only 14 California schools to have received the award five consecutive years. Less than 10 percent of the state's schools received the "Academic Achievement Award" this year.

The award comes in recognition for the school's accomplishment of goals mandated by the No Child Left Behind Act, and for meeting student test score improvement goals measured by the Academic Performance Index.

Principal Eileen Kleiser was not immediately available for comment. Teacher Carla Marquez, as "principal in charge," last month received the award in a presentation from state school superintendent Jack O'Connell.

didn't have a lot of power as a hitter, but he could hit for average, bunt, move runners along, and steal bases, and by 1951, he had made it all the way into the major leagues with the Philadelphia Athletics.

"I only got eleven at-bats in the month or so I was in the major leagues," recalled Eddie, "but I hit the ball pretty good a couple of times on a road trip that took our team to New York, Boston and Washington. Baseball teams traveled by train back in those days and it was really something to see that part of the country and all those famous ballparks, like Yankee Stadium in New York, and Fenway Park in Boston. Unfortunately, there were only 16 big league teams when I was playing, and there were lots of really great ballplayers who wanted those jobs, so when I was sent back down to the minor leagues to a team called the Memphis Chicks, rather than spend a bunch of more years working my way back up to the majors, I decided it was time for me to do something else with my life so I could spend more time with my beautiful wife and family. My children were getting ready to start school and I needed to be home."

After six years of playing professional baseball with -- and against -- some of the best players of his era, Eddie took a job with the Standard Oil Company and never looked back. He later went on to manage numerous gas stations in the Sacramento area and retired as a sales representative in 1982.

"My days of playing professional baseball were very exciting," said Eddie, "but I also enjoyed my second career. Retirement has been fun, too. I've been blessed with pretty good health and I still go golfing every Tuesday morning in Davis with some of my old friends from Bryte and Broderick. We call ourselves the West Sacramento Group and we always have a fun time playing together."

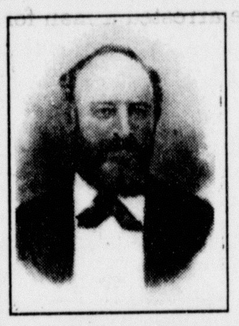

"Eddie was a really good ballplayer and an even better person," recalled Fred Pierini, who grew up with Eddie and played Winter League and semi-professional baseball with him. "He was always nice to everyone, well-mannered, and didn't have a mean bone in his body. I played third and he played short on some of those teams and we had ourselves a great time!"

"I've known Eddie for ages," said former Yolo County Supervisor Art Edmonds. "His wife, Rita, and my wife, Norma, lived next door to each other when they were growing up and even after all these years they are still always on the phone to each other. I used to golf with Eddie, and our families used to take vacations together in Santa Cruz, and he's always been a sweetheart of a man."

Eddie is by nature a modest man and he almost had to be tied down to give this interview, but he was one of the first really great athletes to be produced by this area, and although he and Rita now live in Sacramento, he is remembered with warmth and affection by many people who have at one time or another called Bryte, Broderick, or West Sacramento their home.

"Life has been really good to me," said Eddie. "Best of all, I have a wonderful wife and four super kids (Laurie, Cindy, Billy and Chrissy) who are all doing well. A man can't do better than that."

OPINION

Letters to the Editor

Angry about Iraq

(Daryl Fisher's News-Ledger column) on May 30th entitled "Iraq war hits one local family hard" hits home. You realize how bereft of human feelings our president has become. He has lost all compassion for the young men and women that he sends to a hopeless war. Shades of Vietnam! He says support our troops. Hell, yes, support them by bringing them home. Our so-called leader has no experience as a soldier. He has no son to send to his conflict, but is quite willing to shed the blood of countless other sons. We are not taxed to help pay for the war and by no means will there be a draft. To do so would bring the war where it belongs - home. So as long as we don't feel it hit our pocket books, or demand drafted blood, it is only a shadowy nightmare.

I have a son who wanted to be an Army man. He was proud to be an Army man, served in Kosovo, and is now on his second tour in Iraq. He is burned-out and I am soooo angry!

Thanks, Daryl, for your fine columns regarding this distressing situation.

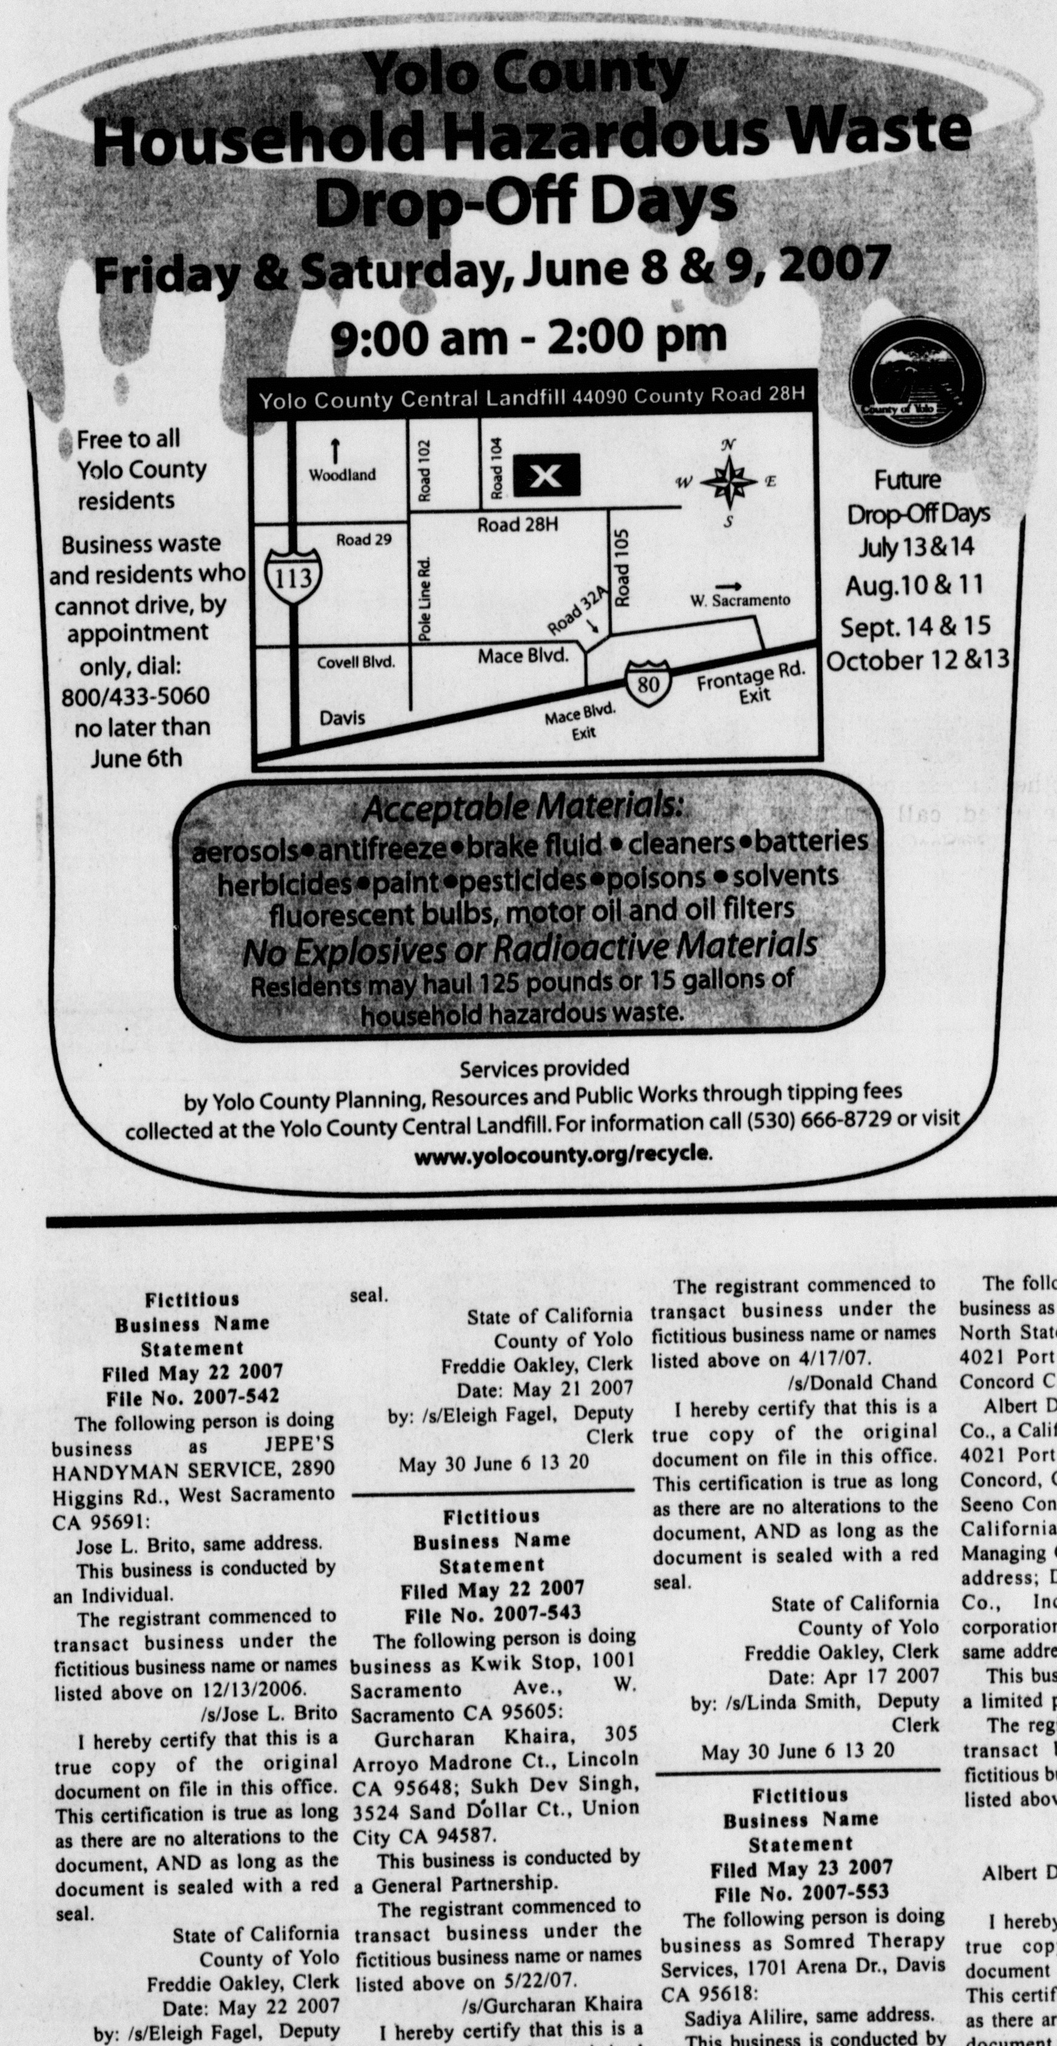

ROBERT CLARK, Sacramento

Blake is right: it's ridiculous

I read Daryl Fisher's column about Dave Blake's son being told he had to go back to Iraq again after being out of the Marines for almost two years and I just want Dave to know that I have his back and agree with everything he said 100 percent! I'm retired from the military and I spent two tours of duty in Vietnam and this war in Iraq was a mistake from the very beginning. Like Dave said in the article, the people of this country were never told the truth, and our grandkids are going to be paying for this war for many years to come.

What the government did to Dave's kid is horrendous -- absolutely terrible. Please let Dave know I think the whole thing is ridiculous.

ED ROBBEN, Sacramento

Guest commentary

Secretly killing a reform

Charles N. Davis
Executive Director,
National Freedom of Information Coalition

Congress, apparently content to explore ever new depths in public disapproval, is on the verge of having a single member derail the most meaningful reform in years of the federal Freedom of Information Act.

How, you ask, when overwhelming majorities support the legislation in both the House and Senate?

The secret hold, of course. Ever heard of the secret hold? It's a beauty – a real relic of the stuffed shirts of yesteryear, smoke-filled rooms and fat cats with stogies guffawing over the latest bamboozle of the taxpaying schmucks. Think country clubs, secret handshakes and bizarre rituals.

Members of the Society of Professional Journalists, the nation's largest journalism-advocacy organization, used the power of the blogosphere to find out whose legislative bludgeon was buried in the back of open government. We called every senator, one by one, until at last – when it became clear he could hide no longer – Sen. Jon Kyl (R-AZ), came blinking and grimacing into the sunlight and admitted that it was he who placed a secret hold ... on a bill that addresses secrecy in government.

You can't make this stuff up.

This is how it works in Washington, kids: Sen. Kyl – this year's Secrecy Champion — has several as-yet-unstated objections to the Freedom of Information Reform Act, a truly wonderful bill that would significantly improve one of the strongest tools Americans have to supervise the inner workings of government and to hold elected officials accountable.

The bill has plenty of bipartisan support. It is the product of tireless work and advocacy by many open government and press freedom groups and fine legislative craftsmanship by Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman John Cornyn (R-TX) and Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT). The U.S. House of Representatives in March approved a version of the bill with 80 Republicans joining 228 Democrats for a 308-117 vote.

The Senate Judiciary Committee then unanimously sent the measure forward to the full Senate for a vote.

In your civics book, this would be the moment where our senators hold a public debate on the merits and demerits of the legislation at hand, then vote. The votes are then counted, and if the senators who support the bill outnumber those who oppose it, well, you get the idea.

But no, not when senators, using an archaic parliamentarian parlor trick, can stop a bill dead in its tracks merely by telling their party's Senate leader or secretary that they wish to place a hold on the bill. That's when Sen. Kyl – who routinely charts a brave course on the immigration debate, and can often be counted on to reason rather than bloviate – slipped in the hold.

The practice of honoring secret holds has no basis in law and has no support in Senate rules. It's a good-'ol-boy creation and another of the seemingly endless perks of the Senate, where the rules always seem to benefit the representatives far more than the pesky public.

Oh, I know what's coming: the inevitable blathering about the world's greatest deliberative body and its need for timeless soul-searching and "candor" and how terribly hard legislating can be. We'll hear all about collegiality and efficiency and the grand traditions that make the Senate "special."

Spare me. Tear down the whole argument in favor of secret holds, and it comes down to cowardice: it allows a senator to cower behind anonymity while signaling their dislike for a piece of legislation. More to the point, it takes what would be a single losing vote on the floor of the Senate and converts it, magically, into stoppage of legislation.

That's awesome power with absolutely no accountability.

Sen. Charles Grassley (R-IA), who discloses his holds as a matter of practice, introduced an amendment in 2006 to force all senators to identify themselves when placing a hold on a bill. That proposal has gone nowhere fast.

Are you surprised?

Charles N. Davis, a member of the Society of Professional Journalists Freedom of Information Committee, serves as the executive director of the National Freedom of Information Coalition at the University of Missouri School of Journalism.

"28 Weeks Later"

Running time: 99 minutes
MPAA rating: R

I've always enjoyed zombie movies because they were so laughable. I mean, come on. Zombies move so slowly they make Frankenstein look like an Olympic sprinter.

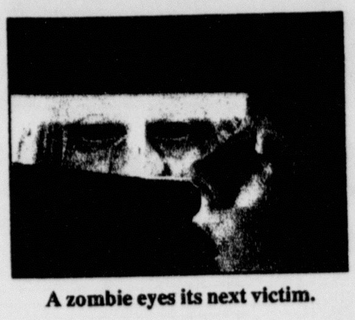

But then Danny Boyle created "28 Days Later" in 2005 and redefined the zombie genre by making zombies amped up with super strength, speed and savagery. This was not my grampa's zombie movie. And it scared the hell out of me.

Now, here we are, two years and "28 Weeks Later." And although Boyle has handed over the directing duties to Juan Carlos Fresnadillo, the spirit and the intensity of the first movie is maintained. In fact, the sequel is in many ways more terrifying and dark than the original.

The film takes place 28 weeks after the end of the first film. Britain is completely unpopulated because of the zombie attacks begun in the first movie. A NATO military force led by the U.S. Army has established a safe zone in London's Isle of Dogs and has begun allowing civilians to return.

Among the returnees are a young brother and sister, Andy (Mackintosh Muggleton) and Tammy (Imogen Poots), whose father, Don (Robert Carlyle), is the head custodian with a shameful secret (I'm not gonna spoil it).

A sad and tragic chain of events leads to the re-emergence of the Rage

A zombie eyes its next victim.

Virus and the creation of more Berzerker Zombies. Code Red is declared, and the U.S. Army begins killing everything that moves — whether that person is infected or not. A chase then begins, and the fates of Andy and Tammy (who also harbor a crucial secret) hang in the balance.

"28 Weeks Later" is one of the most savage and dark movies I've seen. It's definitely not for everyone. But if you've got the stomach for it, I strongly recommend giving it a look.

Schug Sonoma Coast Chardonnay

"The fruit for this wine comes from a combination of the winery's estate vineyard in Carneros, and those farther up in Sonoma Valley. The Carneros fruit delivers a spicy bouquet, citrus and tropical fruit flavors and good acidity for depth and balance. Elegant buttery textures and ripe flavors of pear and peach, which comes from Chardonnay grown in the warmer reaches of Sonoma Valley."
